THE GREAT MOON BOMBING

by Ken Welch in Houston

October 15, 2009

Many of our readers are asking about the implications of the Moon bombing, and well they should! It's a pretty strange event any way you look at it. Worse yet, NASA's credibility is so bad that we don't know if the bombing even took place. So what's going on?

I think that the organization that owns and runs our secret space program has had 50 years or more to copy and perhaps even improve on alien-based hardware and weapons, and they are just itching to take another crack at E.T. After all, treaties only last until the next war. The problem is that a new war with alien races is not going to be confined to the moon, and it will not be possible to do it in secret again.

I would say the Moon-bombing is the kick-off of a campaign designed to get public enthusiasm stirred up for going back to the Moon. We'll be told that plenty of water was discovered, so a moon base is now feasible. Of course we may already have a moon base, permitted by some provision of the NAIA peace treaty that we don't know about. It might be what Buzz Aldrin called the "earth dome."

But that will remain secret, as will the sordid history we've just exposed in our recent Moon reports. There is no way that they want people to know that we already nuked members of an alien society who have been living on the Moon for quite some time.

So I'll bet that within the next few weeks you'll see Congress being pushed to provide NASA with the funding to "go to the Moon again." Once we send a new ship of some kind, and it reports being molested by nasty Aliens, the public will easily be swayed to accept war with E.T.

After all, it's our Moon, isn't it?

Apparently, our black ops Space Navy thinks they might win this time. Or do they? The knowledge of hostile aliens may create greater support for Big Brother government (one world govt.?) pretty much as predicted in the famous Report From Iron Mountain. In fact, the more I think about this, the more interesting that idea becomes.

So the upside is that if you are one of those who always wanted to have a really good UFO sighting, in a couple years you may see them zipping right over your neighborhood while your neighbors take potshots at them. Shortly after I began taking my first look at the Apollo 11 material, Cliff High, of the linguistics web-bot project you are always hearing about, reported that just such a scenario was showing up on the horizon of the mass unconscious mind. Our project and their project are generally complimentary and we often end up tracking the same themes.

How will it all turn out? Well, that's beyond the limits of our reversed speech technology, and your guess is just as good as mine. But one way or another, E.T. is going to move from fiction to reality and life on planet Earth will become a lot more interesting.
